Free stamp giveaway to young collectors who visit IGPC booth at World Stamp Championship Exhibition in Israel

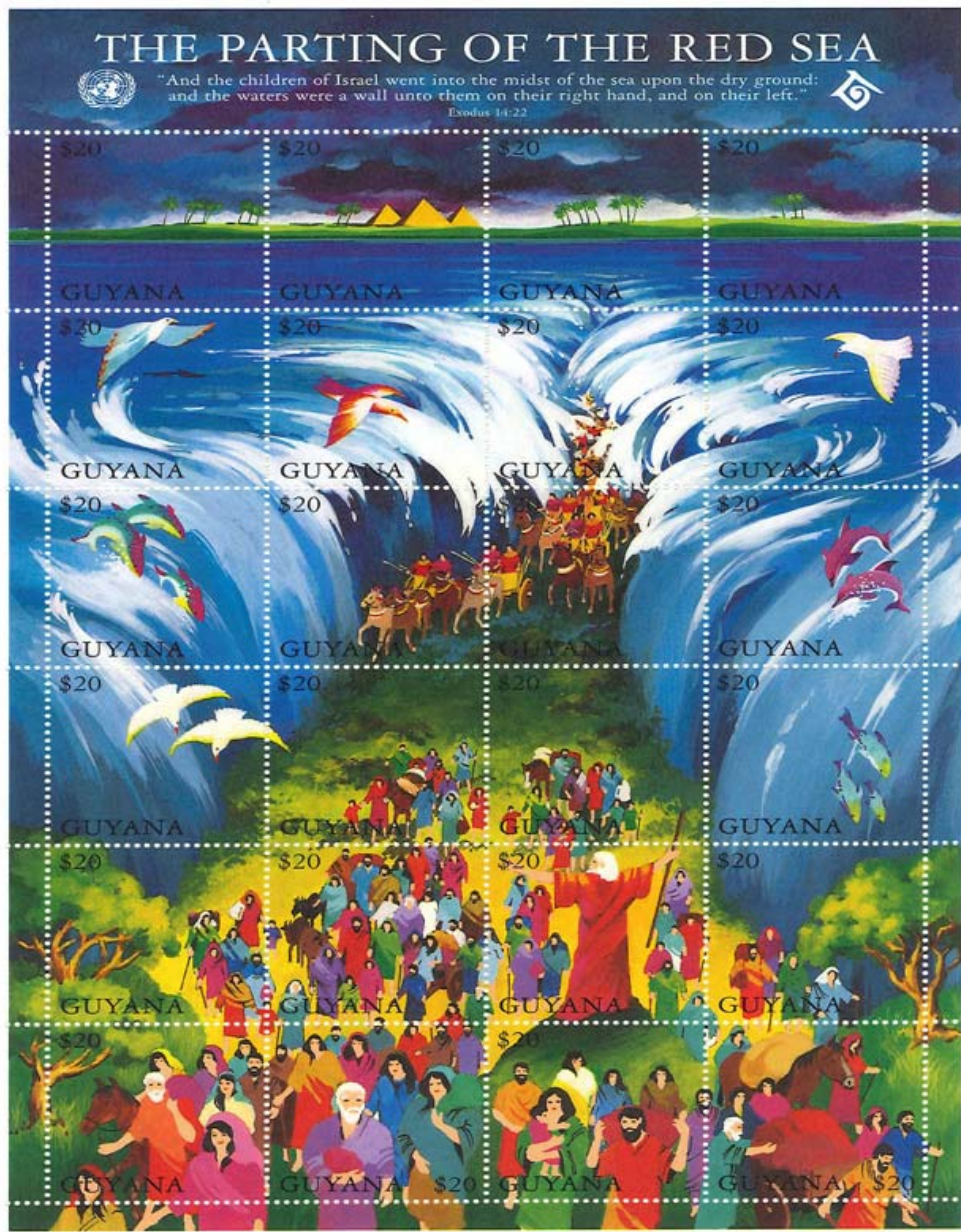

New York, NY, May 9, 2008- The Inter-Governmental Philatelic Corporation (IGPC), the New York City based worldwide agents to over 70 government postal agencies will be exhibiting postage stamps from around the world at the Israel 2008 World Stamp Championship Exhibition in Tel Aviv, Israel from May 14th through May 21st. The Israel 2008 World Stamp Championship Exhibition is the premier international stamp exhibition of the year and IGPC will be a featured exhibitor at the show. IGPC will be presenting unique issues in honor of the show as well as special promotions for all those in attendance.

On each day of the first two days of the exhibition IGPC will be offering a free sheet of stamps to the first 500 collectors under the age of 16 who stop by the IGPC booth. Each collector will receive a unique bible-themed issue that will certainly enhance any new collection. IGPC has long been at the forefront of educating the public about the exciting world of stamp collecting and this show provides an excellent forum for continuing this tradition.

About IGPC: Founded in 1957, IGPC is the world's largest and most prestigious Philatelic agency representing over 70 International Government Postage Agencies. IGPC's innovative designs and featured themes have helped to keep stamp collecting current and to maintain its exalted status as "The Hobby of Kings."
